

Green Experiments

Cooking Monsters

September, 2018

Katoon (3.4) has been exploring the color table. She has been tracing lines in similar shades of colors, and she says she is drawing a monster.

Through shades of green she started playing with the colors and markers, pretending to (what it looked like) stirring and perhaps making a soup. Frantically she exclaimed, “Yuum!!”, as she savored her mouth.

While I took her photos she offered to give me some of her delicious food from the pencil, which I pretended to eat as I snapped a photo.

I then offered the green sensory bottle, and she happily continued to add this potion into her scrumptious recipe. Lila (4.8) comes from behind and observes Katoon passionately mix and stir.

When she finished, she gave me her drawing. I asked if this was a soup, she shook her head denying my theory. She replied with a smile and confidence, “Monster!”.

Could this possibly be a recipe for a monster?...

